

Welcome, fellow doggies and their human companions...

I'm Ella, and I'm in desperate need of CyberKnife treatments--which are pinpointed radiations that will shrink the growths on my spine, which are pressing onto my spinal cord, causing leg weakness and tremors. I'm not in pain, and still wagging, but my back legs have been collapsing under me and I have been landing on my behind! The vets have all stated I have the (great) body of an 8-yr old dog--but shh I'm really 14--and with these treatment can most probably live a happy, healthy life for many more years. And, there is a 90% recovery rate for canine spinal, nasal and brain cancers. We don't know if the growths are cancerous or not, but in either case, the treatment is the same. I found Animal Specialty Center in Yonkers that does these treatments but ouch, it costs $9,200 which my owner-companion Michele quickly needs to raise. Could you please help lend a paw to my healing?
