Dear Keri and the Paws 4 A Cure Family,

Dustan and I want to thank you for your generous financial assistance. You put our minds at ease when we were able to get our baby, Bruno, the medial attention he needed.

In March of this year, I noticed that Bruno was straining at the litter box. We took him to the vet and he let us know that Bruno was very constipated. The vet gave us Lactulose and some other meds to alleviate the issue. No matter how much of the medication we gave him, Bruno just continued to strain at the box - with no results. He became lethargic and refused to eat. The vet suggested at this point we should take him to the Oradell Animal Hospital to get him the help he needed.

After the doctors there examined Bruno, we were told he was severely impacted and would need to be surgically "de-pooped". The alternative was grim, so Bruno underwent the procedure. He came out just fine and was back to his old self in no time! We needed only to continue giving him the Lactulose as prescribed.

Fast forward to September 2014 and I noticed Bruno was straining at the box again. Since I didn't want the little guy to undergo the same thing he had been through earlier in the year, we called the vet immediately. The vet let us know that the only thing that could be done for Bruno would be to have a surgery that would remove a portion of his intestines and the details are far too complicated for me to discuss here – but I'm sure you get the picture. Once again, we were back at the Oradell Animal Hospital.

Both Dustan and I have been unemployed since January of this year. We are both strapped, barely getting by as it is and were faced with having to live with putting Bruno down because we simply could not afford treatment.

Oradell Animal Hospital was kind enough to accept your generous donation and we were able to get Bruno the help he needs.

I can't thank you and Paws 4 A Cure and their donors enough for helping our little guy out!! We've run into a dark patch, but your help has been a light at the end of the tunnel for us.

Warm regards,
Dustan, Bruno and Family
